ST. PETERSBURG SOCIETY.

Several distinguished suicides have contributed items of startling interest to the Winter at the Czar's capital. It may have brought a sorry ray of comfort to that fear-possessed autocrat to see that his subjects who stand nearest the throne sparkled with pleasure. can find life too wearisome to endure.

Most of these sensational suicides were Winter does not affect the fiery temperature which the tender passion generates. One exceedingly wealthy and beautiful widow shot herself. A messenger at once started for her physician, who was unable to attend her, having poisoned himself
